Vol. 1., cloth. $1.

No scientific subject can be so important to man as that of his own life. No knowledge can be so incessantly appealed to by the incidents of every day, as the knowledge of the processes by which he lives and acts. At every mament he is in danger of disobeying laws which, when disobeying may bring years of suffering decline of powers, promature decay. Nanitary reformers preach in vain, because they preach to a public which does not understand the laws of life—laws as rigerous as those of gravitation or motion. Even the sad experience of others yield us no lessons, unless we understand the principles involved. If one man is seen to suffer from vitilated air, another is seen to endure it without apparent hazar, a third concludes that "it is all chance," and trust to that chance. Had he understood the principle involved, he wends not have been ships recked.

There is a daily increasing desire for scientic knowledge. Science passes from its laboratories into the public theroughiares. But although thousands are now amount to anderstand the chief physiological laws, the majority cannot overcome, their invisible resultion from sustonical details. Many would rather tressing a miscellaneous audience, he will imagine that bedde he Medical Student there sits an intelligent Artisan—beside the hian of Letters sits the Mother of a Family; and he will endeavor to be intelligible and interesting to all, while producing the latest discoveries of European investigators, and the results of original SETTION, with the simple rules of diet they suggest; THE STRUCTURE AND USES OF THE BLOUD, out of which the fabric is built up; the history of the discovery of the CIRCULATION, and the paths the blood takes; the important phenomens of RESPIRATION AND SUPFOCATION the curious processes involved in the question WHY WE ARE WARM, AND HOW WE KEEP SO; the many problems of nervous physiology concerned in FEELING AND THINKING—THE MIND AND THE BEAIN—and the respective spheres of OHR SEYNERG AND CHIRCKETS. MIND AND THE BEAIN—and the respective spheres of the SENSES AND SENSATIONS; the mystery and familiarity of SENSES AND DEEAMS; the dispositions, habits, talents, tricks features, and mainties involved in THE QUALPTIES WE INHERIT FROM OUR PARENTS; and finally, the solemn subjects of LIFE AND DEATH.

PEALERS IN WOVEN ELASTIC VULCANIZED RUBBER GOUDS

Are notified not to purchase of Horace H. Day any such goods, unless the same are stamped with the license mark of WILLIAM IUDSON, who is the sole owner of the right to make and sell the same. Our suit against Day to enjoin him from selling such goods, the trial of which was postponed on Day's application from the 27th day of September, is set down for hearing in the U. S. Circuit Court in this city for the 10th inst., when we shall be ready for trial, and when the question will be settled whether the Woven goods right is owned by Horace H. Day, or by the undersigned, licensee of the patentees.

One reason for giving this notice at this time, is, that we have been informed that Horace H. Day and his counsel have, since the adjournment of the hearing which he procured, stated to the Courts where Day has suits pending against venders of Woven Elastic Goods, and to some of the merchants themselves, that we had windrawn this suit, and that there would be no trial of the case between us and him.
